Suit to Prevent Ward Merger

Washington, Feb. 8.—The federal government struck today to prevent the consummation of the $2,000,000, 000 Ward Food Products merger, which has been characterized by its opponents as a "gigantic food monopoly."

Government attorneys went into the federal court at Baltimore at noon today and filed suit against the Ward Food Products Corporation, its officers and subsidiary companies, asking the court to prevent them from completing the proposed consolidation under the Sherman and Clayton acts.

Seven corporations and companies and eight individuals were named as defendants.

Although it was declared that the cost of production of bread has been reduced in the last 25 years the government charges that "such economies have not benefited the consumer by lowering the price of bread, but have been absorbed by the great baking companies."

The General Ward and Continental Baking Corporations have an annual output of about $1,200,000,000, according to the petition.

STORM LESSONS.

The blockade caused by the storm has shown clearly several things and none more clearly than that with sufficient equipment the roads can be kept passable and should be kept passable for motor traffic. Keeping the roads cleared of snow is no longer an experiment, a fad, a theory or a subject that needs debating except as to how to do it most efficiently and quickly. It is emergency work and must be rushed to the limit. This cannot be done without sufficient equipment and the experience of the past few days has shown clearly that both city and county need at least double the equipment now possessed. It is too late to supply this need for the present season, but it should be obtained before another winter.

Another thing that should receive attention is the routing of traffic to meet conditions. At present it is possible to plow a single track through most of the city streets. If all traffic flowed in one direction, this track would remain open and in good condition, but with traffic flowing in two directions there is not only congestion and delay, but the shuffling of vehicles drags the snow back in the track. It is possible and practicable for the city authorities to designate and properly placard temporary one-way streets for use until the snow can be actually removed.

The worst congested street in the city is the Broadway hill and it is there that most of the delay to trolley cars occurs. It could be so arranged by directing traffic to Hasbrouck avenue and Wurts street that at least the section of Broadway from the Strand to McEntee street would be open to only one-way traffic. With a few turnouts for vehicles to get out of the way of trolley cars, this would carry all the traffic until such time as the banks of snow were removed. There are other congested streets that might be treated in the same way, resulting in a great economy in time, gasoline and profanity.

AS TO DICTATORS.

It is nothing new for instinctive admiration for success by whatever means to get the better of traditional American belief in free institutions. That is one way of looking at the sharp dissent of Thomas W. Lamont and Otto H. Kahn from the criticisms of Mussolini by Professor H. H. Harvard before the Foreign Affairs Commission. Mr. Lamont said we ought to be "liberal enough to let Italy have the sort of government she seems to want"—which is right enough as far as it goes, for of course Italy's government is none of our business provided there is no danger that Mussolini's ambitious schemes of imperialistic character may drag the United States into another world war. But Mr. Kahn went as far as to say that "order and national self-preservation" are "more important even than liberty."

It may well be doubted whether either order or national self-preservation are the certain fruits of Mussolini's methods, and certainly no outsider can be sure what the Italians really want as long as their parliamentary institutions are suppressed, their free speech muzzled, their free press no longer in existence, and a dictator in absolute control of everything. Though it is none of our business in one sense, it is by no means inappropriate for an alien still responsive to old American traditions to turn eyes of concern toward a land where political liberty has become the victim of usurpation, and Prof. Elliott speaks from the point of view of this element. With their connections Mr. Kahn and Mr. Lamont, on the other hand, would more or less inevitably be influenced by the attitude of Big Business. It should be no surprise to find Big Business—the impersonal or collective American dictator—trying a sort of sympathy for the personal dictator who holds Italy in the hollow of his hand.

The Church Temperance Society, having decided that the Volstead law is not being enforced, cannot be enforced and is not a good law, the teaching worshippers of that law are denouncing the society, just as they denounced the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America when it ventured to doubt the efficacy of the Volstead law. Neither of these organizations so much as hints that the Volstead law should not be obeyed, or that temperance is not a virtue and intemperance an evil, but for doubting the wisdom of substituting one form of intemperance for another and expressing a belief that it is neither right nor politic to endeavor to bring about by the civil law an enforcement of the ecclesiastical law made by a comparatively few noisy sectarians, they are denounced by those who think the morals, liberties and lives of all the people are in their care.

FOOD AND THE KIDNEYS.

A group of research physicians at the University of Michigan, have been working on the problem of chronic inflammation of the kidneys, or Bright's disease, as it is called. Now that diabetes is under control by insulin, tuberculosis is gradually being defeated, causes of organic heart conditions definitely known, yellow fever reduced to a few cases in two or three isolated places of the globe, diphtheria gradually disappearing, and other advances made, it is but natural that a search should be made as to the cause of this distressing kidney ailment.

These physicians tell us that the search has been going on for over a hundred years.

In their experiments with rabbits fed upon proteins, that is lean meat an irritation of the kidneys was produced.

As rabbits are not animals that eat meat, protein from a vegetable was then used, and again the irritation, with albumen and casts in the urine, was demonstrated.

The experiments were then repeated on white rats whose diet includes all classes of foods. Here also an excess of the proteins—meat, eggs, cereals—produced the irritation of the kidneys.

The point to remember in the above was that it was the "excess" of this kind of food that caused the trouble. When it was fed in smaller quantity to the animals no harm resulted.

Now they admit that the feeding of an excess of this food might be harmful to animals and have no effect upon man, but they feel that a substance which fed in large quantities to animals that eat meat, and to others that do not, causes an inflammation of the kidneys in all of them, cannot be so harmful to man, who likewise eats all kinds of foods.

Their conclusion is that excess of this food alone is not likely to cause inflammation of the kidneys as seen in man, but that an infection from teeth, tonsils, or elsewhere, together with an excess of this kind of food, is likely the cause of the chronic inflammation of the kidneys, we call chronic Bright's disease.

Therefore they state that "while a certain amount of protein is essential to life, it is our belief that amounts much beyond the requirement are responsible for a considerable amount of kidney trouble."

Remember it is not these valuable foods meat, eggs, and cereals that cause kidney trouble, these foods are absolutely essential, but it is eating very large amounts of them that is harmful.

Today's Story in New York History
By Frederic A. Godcharles.
(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

Count Louis de Buade Frontenac, selected to lead troops sent for the relief of Canada, was made governor in 1672, was recalled in 1682, and reappointed in October, 1683, when the French dominions in America were on the brink of ruin. He brought with him troops and supplies and a plan for the invasion and occupation of New York. The incursions of the Iroquois had reduced Canada to great distress and his arrival was timely relief.

The revolution of 1688 in England produced much suffering in some of the English colonies, for it was the cause of war between Great Britain and France, which extended to their American dominions, lasting about seven years, and is known in American History as "King William's War." In this conflict the Indians bore a conspicuous part, and terrible were many of their achievements. Under the influence of the Jesuit priests they became allies of the French.

Hostilities began in the summer of 1689, when the Indians attacked the frontier settlements of New England in July; and in August they captured the garrison at Pemaquid, Maine; but the grand plan was Frontenac's expedition to New York, with the design of capturing Albany.

He had gathered at Montreal his large military force and depended much on his Mohawk allies for the success of his enterprise; the weather was intensely cold and the snow deep. The expedition traversed the wilderness with snowshoes.

After a tedious march during more than a week Frontenac reached the Hudson, where two trails diverged, one leading to Albany and the other to Schenectady. They all without further words took the latter. The Indians knew full well that to attempt Albany would have been an act of desperation; the march was almost impassable during the thaw, and so painful and slow was their progress over the better path that it was nine days before they reached a point about two miles from Schenectady.

At four o'clock in the afternoon of February 8, 1690, the scouts found four Iroquois squaws in a hut. They captured them and crowded about the lonely fire in the wigwams to warm their chilled feet and numb hands. By dark the little army had reached the Mohawk River, a little above the village.

A Canadian scout, who had reconnoitred the village, reported that he had seen nobody. It was intended to postpone the attack till two o'clock in the morning, but the situation was intolerable, they could make no fires for fear of detection, and they must move or perish. Guided by the frightened captive squaws, they crossed the Mohawk on the ice, and tramped through snow drifts till eleven o'clock when they sighted the village.

Schenectady was the farthest outpost of the colony of New York. The village had grown to be a town of eighty houses, surrounded by a stockade which had two gates, one towards Albany, the other toward the Mohawk forests. The garrison consisted of eight or nine Connecticut militia under Lieutenant Tallmadge. There were about thirty friendly Mohawks in the place, on a visit.

There had been some festivity during the evening, but it was now over and all the inhabitants were asleep.

The assailants formed in two bands, Sainte-Helene leading one and Mantet the other. They passed through the gate together, then one turned to the right, the other to the left, and they fled around the village until the leaders met at the farther end, completely surrounding the place.

The horrible signal of the war-whoops was given, and the attack began. Doors were broken open with hatchets, indiscriminate slaughter ensued, neither women nor children were spared. "No pen can write, and no tongue express," wrote Major Peter Schuyler, "the cruelties that were committed."

There was little resistance, except at the block house, where Tallmadge and his men made a stubborn fight, but soon the defenders were killed and the building set on fire.

A few escaped at the eastern gate, and fled through the storm to Albany. Sixty persons were killed outright, of whom thirty-eight were men and boys, ten women and twelve children. Between eighty and ninety were taken captive.

The massacre and pillage lasted two hours. The French and Indians withdrew at noon the following day, laden with booty and drove their prisoners through the snow into the forest.

Of the victors, only two are known to have been killed.

Water Farming For Sea FoodArtificial Propagation of Oysters
Opens Vast Production Field—
May Be Produced By Newly Discovered Method and Greatly Increase Food Supply.

Albany, Feb. 8.—A vast field for the profitable use of lands under water for shell fish culture has been opened up by the successful culmination of the Conservation Commission's experiments in the artificial propagation of oysters, and the revival of an industry that has been declining because of inability to obtain seed.

Securing new food sources is becoming a national problem. A greater proportion of the essential fresh foods must in the future come from the sea. The announcement of a successful method of hatching shellfish by the commission promises not only to assist a failing industry, but to increase a very desirable food. Thousands of acres of fertile sea farms lie idle under New York state waters which could be profitably utilized in producing great quantities of nutritious and appetizing shellfish. The conservation of this valuable resource awaits only the application of scientific methods of cultivation.

Shellfish are naturally adapted to agriculture, as the art of water farming is called. Unlike the itinerant shoal of fishes, here today, and gone tomorrow, the lovely molluscs are content to settle on a chosen spot until ready for the harvest. An incentive is offered the water farmer for the skill and effort on which success depends—just as to the dirt farmer.

With available seed the rewards from the shellfish farm may equal acre for acre the best truck farms. Exceptionally favorable oyster ground in Connecticut has been assessed on a valuation as high as $1,500 an acre. Not all kinds of shellfish, however, yield such high returns for methods of cultivation are restricted by their various habits.

Whereas the oyster lends himself naturally to quantity production by the use of power dredges, and grows on large plantations even under a hundred feet of water, the soft clam, so popular in clam bakes, buries himself under the sandy flats where he can be dug laboriously by hand only at low tide. The valuable little neck is cultivated both ways while the festive scallop always ready to move, without notice is best suited to community culture, and even the little appreciated mussel has in recent years come in for a share of attention. Regardless of kind, however, in each instance there must be some dependable supply of seed.

It is the seed problem which has limited shellfish culture. Although the extension of cultivated ground improves the crop, it does not so greatly increase the stock. It tends on the contrary to withdraw the stock from the natural spawning areas and by rearrangement to disturb nature's balance. Instead of an increase of ground under cultivation there has been a decline for many years and millions of dollars have been written off the books of the industry.

The vicious cycle is complete: Shellfish are adaptable to culture because they are stationary.

Because they are stationary they cannot spawn each other in spawning and the spawn must be distributed by the tides and currents requiring millions of eggs to produce an adult. Because millions of eggs must be produced each egg must be small. Because the eggs are small it has taken nearly fifty years for scientists to discover a method by which to grow them in confinement.

Once having overcome the difficulties, artificial propagation turns the smallness of the egg to advantage. Unlimited numbers of eggs easily can be obtained, which because of their smallness can be handled in vast numbers in a relatively small hatchery. By the time they cease drifting to settle down for life, a million can be placed in a wine glass. At popular prices, a million of the table variety $60,000. This obvious opportunity of shellfish hatching has been known to scientists for nearly fifty years, but until five years ago the scientists had not succeeded in propagating the egg to the adult.

The conservation method described by the Conservation Commission in its annual report offers the key to shellfish culture. The industry must however, be encouraged to take this revolutionary step. Scientific agriculture and forestry had to be demonstrated by experiment stations and nurseries to the farmer and lumberman. So, probably, will it be necessary in convincing the water farmer to produce commercial quantities of seed at a practical cost.

A great deal has been accomplished with the cramped facilities of a temporary hatchery. The results justify the expenditure needed to expand it to a real shellfish experiment station. With reasonable support much more can be accomplished in working out the commercial problems connected with the application of the method. By also conducting scientific investigations the station could maintain the pre-eminent reputation which its achievements have already created. Requests are constantly received from all parts of the world for reports on the work and a wealth of new material bearing on the problems of the industry has been opened to science.

No more promising investment is open to the State. Every bushel of shellfish propagated artificially will return a yield directly in rental of the ground, and indirectly in employment of labor and capital and in the export of food to the people. Should the commission be permitted to sell seed at cost it should in itself repay the original expenditure.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

JIMMIE GOAT'S IDEA

"Watch me do it when I have the chance," said Jimmie, the goat. "What are you planning to do?" asked Sammy, the lamb. Now Sammy, the lamb, and Jimmie, the goat, were special pets of the keeper who had many other animals in his charge in the zoo. Sammy and Jimmie used to follow him around as he fed the other animals. "Just watch me," said Jimmie. "But tell me what I am to watch," said Sammy. "You're to watch me. That is what you are to watch," said Jimmie. "I'm watching you," said Sammy. "But," he added, "you aren't doing anything." "Not now," said Jimmie. "But I will be doing something most interesting, soon." "Something for the good of all goats?" "I'm waiting and I'm watching," said Sammy. "Just a moment now," said Jimmie. Then the keeper came along and with him was a lady who was writing everything she could find out about goats. She was writing in a book, and she was writing down what they ate and how they slept and how the little goats were all born in the springtime. She was putting it down in pencil in a very large notebook. "Here is my special pet, Jimmie," said the keeper to the lady. "And here is my other special pet, Sammy." Sammy was rather shy with visitors but Jimmie was not in the least shy. He grabbed hold of the book in which the lady was writing and he was about to tear it up and eat all he was about to eat when the keeper shouted to him: "Jimmie! Jimmie, rude Jimmie!" "You mustn't eat the lady's book!" "Bad, bad Jimmie!" That made Jimmie feel very bad to hear the keeper call him bad and rude. So he dropped the book and nudged up against the keeper to be petted. "What did you do that for?" asked Sammy. "Was that what you wanted me to watch and see? Why was that for the good of all goats?" "I didn't want the lady to make any mistakes when she was writing about goats." "To make sure of it and to make certain she would not make any mistakes I thought it would be for the good of all goats to eat up the book." "Then there wouldn't be a single mistake. There couldn't be." "So she would not, if I had succeeded, be able to tell a single thing about goats that was not correct." "Still she may be careful not to make mistakes. It is quite likely she will be." "She is listening attentively to the keeper and he knows." "But I was trying to make sure. Still if it was rude to do that I must not be rude, and so I stopped when the keeper told me to stop." "But she saw how fuzzy I was, so I don't believe she will write anything but the truth about goats." "I don't believe she will write anything but the truth," said Sammy. "I don't think you need worry." "I won't," said Jimmie, and they both cheerfully and happily followed after the keeper once more, as he went about his duty, the lady about the goat.

Painless Surgery Has Made Rapid Advance

The surgery of a century ago was a painful and almost brutal procedure. The Scientific American says. With the coming of antiseptics and later of anesthetics, following the work of Lister and Pasteur, the mortality which resulted from surgery was greatly reduced through the elimination of bacterial infection following operation. With the development of anesthesia, beginning with the work of Morton and Long on ether, and following with chloroform, nitrous oxide-oxygen gas, novocain and intraspinal anesthesia, the use of narcotics preliminary to operation to reduce the patient's sensibility and, more recently, the development of another gas anesthetic, ethylene, physicians have been able to work more slowly, more carefully and more accurately, extending surgical procedures to organs heretofore unapproachable by the surgeon's knife. Whether saving many lives in conditions previously called insuperable. Moreover, extended study of nerve points and nerve paths, with the development of anesthetic substances which may be applied directly to nerves, permits effectively blocking the sense of pain which may proceed along the nerves to the brain. So-called local anesthetics with such drugs as procaine and butyn enables surgeons to operate on patients who are fully conscious and therefore are better able to resist the shock which may accompany extensive operative measures.

Comes Under Head of "Better Left Unaid"

It was our first call on the new neighbors and Mr. B. and I were about the peculiar names of certain dogs of the community.

The women, who had been parties to our conversation in its beginning, it seems, had switched to the subject of their own names and those of their families, while we were still talking dogs, and when there came a moment of silence between Mr. B. and me I heard the end of Mrs. B.'s remark about "Fanny." Wishing to show my interest and having noted a rather disgusted expression in my hostess' voice, I said sympathetically, "Fanny, good Lord, who's dog's that?" I never have been more warmly received in my life than when, after an awkward pause, my wife said: "Mr. B.'s name is Fanny."—Chicago Tribune.

Faithful but Fractious

Some of these young women trend love as though it was a naughty boy who should be made to stand in a corner except as a great treat once in six weeks. . . . Women can be very thorough. Wives can be intolerant. England and America are strewn with good men suffering from their wives' strictness. It is damnable. When a woman is faithful to her husband she generally manages to take it out of him in some other way. The mere fact that she is faithful makes her think that she has a right to be—well, disagreeable. Fidelity enforces the death of a lot of trouble in the home unless it is well managed. Fidelity needs just as much good management as, undoubtedly, from "May Fair." by Michael Arlen.

4 Incorporations Here in January

Mouth Showed Largest Number of Companies Incorporated in New York State in Any Month in State's History.

Albany, Feb. 8.—Florida is not commanding all attention these days when it comes to real estate, for a report just issued by Florence E. S. Knapp, secretary of state, covering the past month's activities in the corporation bureau, shows that 790 real estate and building companies incorporated in New York state last month. While a large percentage of these were located in and around New York city, others were scattered over the state. The demand for homes does not appear to be limited to any particular section.

More companies of all sorts and descriptions incorporated and embarked in business last month in this state than during any single month in the state's history. The total of 2,640 companies is a gain of 674 over the same month a year ago. Not only were there more companies but also nearly every county in the state was represented in companies receiving charters.

The motion picture industry claimed 32; garment-making 88 and radio nine. One company incorporated to manufacture pocketbooks and several to wave the hair. Nassau county led outside of the metropolis, with 90 companies to its credit for the month.

In Ulster county, four companies with a total capitalization of $510,000, incorporated last month.

Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HUTTON.

THE DOPPELED SNOOPER.

Now after row of small cages containing these creatures can be seen by the casual visitor in the snuff factories at Copenhagen, where they are used to test out samples of the product so that it will be a uniform grade. When quite young they are trained for the work by placing them over a mixture of red pepper and boiled luteafisk, so that their sneezing nerves will be toughened, and only the highest-powered snuff will cause them to kerchoo. The cages are very clever contrivances that will dump the snuff into containers on receiving the sneeze.

The above sketch depicting a snuffer sent out on a hunt for some lost snuff, shows very clearly the large paper-shell peccan head with split bean ears and clove nose. The body is a single peanut, and the feet are split almond kernels. The legs and tail are toothpicks, and the tassel on the tail is a star macaroni. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service.) GOOD ROADS

POSTAL SERVICE IS BEING AIDED

The postal service of the United States is today using more than one million miles of public roads in the delivery of daily mail. In delivering mail to 80,000,000 individuals on rural routes, 1,206,372 miles of highway are being used every day. Notwithstanding the great increase in mileage covered through the improvement of roads, there are more than 14,000,000 persons waiting to be added as soon as the service can be extended.

These interesting points have been brought out as a result of an investigation conducted by the American Association of State Highway Officials to find out who is really using the highways.

"The postal department is only one of the many large users of the highways," says the report, and more firms are turning to the roads as a means of final distribution for their products.

"The importance of the roads in the modern scheme of transportation cannot be overestimated, for the far reaches of trade of many of the large and medium-sized companies now extend down to the smallest communities. This is especially true of those corporations which sell small and commodities through the mail and through the small retailer.

"One of the three elements used by the federal government in the distribution of funds to states for roads is the mileage of post roads used in each state for rural mail delivery. Our inquiry has brought out the fact that in the past five years, through the improvement of roads, the postal department has been able to add 17 new rural routes which carry mail 226,300 families. The general improvement in roads has enabled the postal department to lengthen 1 mile of 2,440 established routes.

The report of the association concludes by calling attention to the fact that "the ordinary length of a rural route is 21 miles, and where four are over unimproved roads, this represents an all-day job of delivery, but road improvement has enabled United States to lengthen many routes and give additional service to rural families. In some instances carriers are able to carry to more families and do the job in half the time required ten years ago, due to the paving of the roads."

Four Important Factors Making for Road Safety

The four important factors affecting safety in highway traffic, said Edward S. Jordan at the recent meeting in Cleveland of the safety council of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, are brakes, steering, easy vision and lights.

"Satisfactory lighting," added Mr. Jordan, "has been made difficult by conflicting laws in different states, but there has been increasing progress and most manufacturers have made light control easy by placing the switch on the steering column or in the center of the steering wheel.

"The uninterrupted vision of the driver has been improved. The front pillars on enclosed cars have been narrowed through the use of steel construction, and one-piece windshields are becoming more in vogue while the almost universal use of an automatic windshield cleaners is a protection against obscured vision from rain or snow.

Lime Keeps Roads Firm

Experiments of engineers have developed, it is claimed, that mixture of 2 to 5 per cent of hydrated lime with the top surfacing of country dirt roads has ended excessive rutting and clinging of the clay to feet of animals and tires of automobiles, after rainfalls. The clay and lime mixture does not stick. Instead it tends to smooth out and pack down more quickly than does untreated surfacing. The roads also respond more readily to dragging.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Good Roads Hints

Water damages more roads than anything else, so clean out roadside ditches.

State and county roads by the end of this year will total approximately 2,000 miles, according to estimates of the bureau of public roads.

A good road soon pays for itself in savings of vehicle running expenses for its users, as everybody knows, but the waste goes on until it is improved.

The United States is now credited with building the finest highways in the world.

A recent issue of the Detroit School of Police tells of the crusade against jaywalking by the children themselves. Those guilty of the offense are brought before a court composed of the pupils and are tried according to regular court procedure. If the court finds against them, they are given sentence to do in the way of sentences which make them more careful the next time.

American League Forced to Follow

Colonel Ruppert Says National's Action On Landis Contract Forces American To Follow or Be Called Disloyal.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

New York, Feb. 8.—There will be absolutely no loss of life in Washington tomorrow through a stampede of American Leaguers to climb aboard the band wagon and join the National League's movement for a bigger and better regime for Judge Landis, according to Colonel Jacob Ruppert, Yankee president. The colonel has nothing against Landis, either as a commissioner or as a man. Neither, he believes, has the American League in general.

He merely thinks that some one has rushed in where angels fear a trampled toe and, in consequence, there has been no chance for concerted action, particularly on the terms of the new contract that might be extended to the judge. It might be necessary to make a few changes in the document, he intimated, since the old one was largely experimental. At the same time, he admitted that the National League's action meant that the American Leaguers ultimately would be forced to follow suit or be branded "as disloyal to Landis."

The colonel is a pro-Landis man but thinks he is entitled to resent what he feels to be a bit of "hopping off out of turn" by the National League. He thinks the boys should have gotten together in the back rooms somewhere and talked things over.

I admire Judge Landis personally and am a strong supporter of his regime," Ruppert declared. "But that doesn't blind me to the fact that the National League was unnecessarily premature in its resolution to extend his term ten years. What was the big rush? The judge's contract has two years to run and both leagues could have gotten together on an extension in due course.

"Now, however, we will have to play ball on that resolution or be called disloyal to Landis. I think the National League went out of its way to place us in an embarrassing position.

"I cannot understand this inter-league rivalry of a personal nature between men whose business interests dovetail so closely. The very nature of the resolution would seem to demand mature thought. Ten years is a long time for any man to remain at the head of an institution. The United States only elects its president for four years. Then the contract was only

Helen Not the Least Troubled

Cannes, Feb. 8.—Helen Wills is not in the least perturbed over the fact that she met defeat yesterday in the mixed doubles, when pitted against Suzanne Lenglen.

The California girl looks forward to the possibility of meeting Suzanne in the singles of the Carlton Club tournament this week as "lot of fun."

"My, what a fuss everyone is making about two girls who want to play a game of tennis," said Miss Wills today. "Really, nobody ever thinks about the fun I get out of tennis. In the first place I came to France to study, that's work. When I play tennis that's play and fun. Suzanne is a wonderful player and though I have heaps of confidence in myself, I wouldn't for the world attempt to predict the result."

Miss Wills took her defeat of yesterday philosophically. "My lobbing wasn't so good," she said. "I couldn't keep them in the back court. Naturally, Suzanne killed them off the net."

Both Miss Wills and Miss Lenglen drew byes in today's play.

Miss Wills is paired with Miss Contoux in the doubles and is not entered in the mixed doubles. Suzanne is expected to withdraw from the doubles in order to save her strength for the singles.

After yesterday's game there is no doubt here but what Suzanne is the best bet in the match against Miss Wills. Her play yesterday showed her to be a more brilliant player, even though she did lack the stamina of the American girl.

NEW PALM NORMAL SUBMERGED MIDDLES.

After having tasted defeat from the Middletown High School five, cellar holders of the DUSO League although reinforced with alumni and ineligible DUSO players the New Palm Normal team played the Middles at New Palm, Friday evening and had no difficulty at all in trimming them by a 56 to 16 tally.

Trinity Foretells Match.

Sport Immortals for Hall of Fame

Here are pictured four of the immortals of the world of sport, who are to be the first to be honored in the name of the cathedral of St. John the Divine. At the top on the left is Walter Camp, in the center Christy Mathewson, and on the right is Robert Wrenn, a star at Harvard and former tennis champion. Below on the right is Hobey Baker, Princeton athletic star.

She is expected to meet Suzanne Lenglen at Nice.

Great Success of Harry Cooper as Golf Teacher

The golfing career of young Harry Cooper, who captured a $3,500 prize in the recent tournament at Los Angeles, has been one of triumphs since he won his first "real" prize at the age of fourteen.

Cooper, now twenty-one, took up the ancient game when he was three years old, his father, Sid J. Cooper, maintains, and has been chasing golf balls ever since, achieving some notable triumphs in his more mature years.

When fourteen Cooper won a cup offered by the Golfers Magazine. After that his career was chosen and he threw his optimistic youth into the ranks of more seasoned masher manipulators with surprising results at times. He took first honors at the state tournament at Galveston in 1923, and again at San Antonio in 1924. He emerged third in the Southwest competition at Hot Springs the same year, and was runner-up in the Texas state tourney last year.

Among the other amazing accomplishments of the youngster, who neither chews, drinks nor smokes, is the scoring of a 69 on the Tension Country club course, Dallas, last year, the lowest mark ever registered on the course, by either local golfers or national celebrities.

Seeking New Names for Shots in Tennis Game

"Lob," "smash" and "drive," as applied to tennis, are three words the translation of which into French has stumped the French sporting writers in a campaign to eliminate the English vocabulary from their articles on sport events.

The best they have been able to find is "chandel" for lob, "coup de longneur" for drive and "coup de force" for smash.

Jean Samazeuilh, former champion of France at tennis, takes exception to the accuracy and practicability of the translation, and in an article in a sports weekly asks the players to ignore the scribbles, and especially to execute the shots well on the courts, let the writers call them what they wish.

Profits Are Large

In the old days minor league clubs figured they were doing mighty well if they broke even on the season. Yet the old Fall River club of the New England League actually declared a 100 per cent dividend for the 1925 season, a positive enough declaration that baseball paid fairly well even in those days when 25 cents was the standard pay and 50 cents guaranteed a seat in the wooden pavilion.

Divine Tree

The conversion tree of Asia is considered divine. It is the Bo tree, or peepal. This is the sacred fig tree, from which, under which Buddha sat during the night in which he reached supreme enlightenment.

Rough Game

"What is the prospect of that gentleman who works on 'how' to be better?" "Judging from the 'how' to be better," answered Miss X. "I should say he is an anthropologist."

Sport Notes

Chicago City Chess league recently started its twenty fifth season.

Notre Dame football eleven met its last defeat at home playing Wabash October 21, 1905.

The Western conference baseball season will start April 10, Northwest visiting Purdue.

The women's national track and field championships of the A. A. U. will be held in Philadelphia on July 10 next.

Harvard athletics showed a net profit from football this fall of $29,000. Net profit means that the team was deducted.

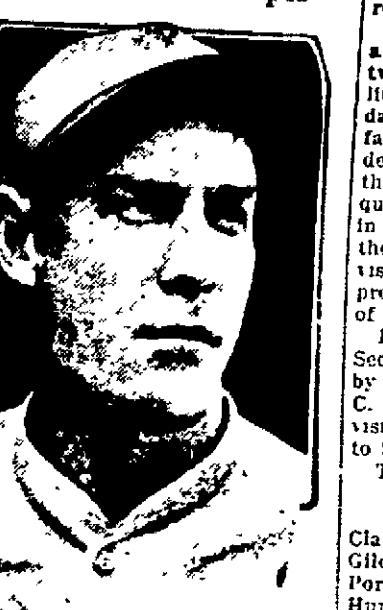

Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast league has sold Outfielder Clarence Twombly to the Reading club of the International league.

Edward Lasker, several times holder of the western chess championship, will make New York city his home in the future. He has joined the Manhattan Chess club.

The United States Naval academy will hold the boxing championships of the collegiate association at Annapolis March 26 and 27 and the swimming events April 2 and 3.

Carl Freeze, young right-handed pitcher, has been turned over to the Little Rock club of the Southern league by the Chicago White Sox. Freeze comes from Baylor university.

Hard Luck of Harper

George Harper, outfielder for the Philadelphia National league team, has had hard luck in getting established in the big leagues. Three times he has been up and some unfortunate accident has sent him back each time. He now hopes to stick with the Phillies.

Umpires Ride in Taxicabs

Umpires in the Pacific Coast league will ride in taxicabs from the trains to hotels and from the hotels to the ballparks next year, according to Harry A. Williams, president of the Coast league.

"The umpires have to carry so much baggage that I have decided to allow them taxicab expenses next season," says Williams. "You know that an umpire hasn't many friends."

Started in 1903

The 1926 world series was the twenty-second of the annual struggle for baseball supremacy between the pennant winners of the National and American leagues. The first of these series was played back in 1903, when the Boston Red Sox defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates in five games in three. With the exception of 1904 the series has been played annually.

ITALIAN PRESS SUPPORTS MUSSOLINI'S POLICY

Rome, Feb. 8.—Premier Mussolini has the entire support of the nation in his warlike policy to create anti-Italian propaganda in South Tyrol.

The Italian press today was a unit in supporting the stiff policy adopted by the premier.

"Germany in a three weeks' campaign of hate has lost the fruits of three years of reconstruction," said the Messaggero.

"German boycotts against Italy are sure to prove a boomerang." While some newspapers are inclined to stress the implied threat of Mussolini that Italy would cross the Tyrol borders if necessary, the Messaggero and Popolo Italia urged the public to maintain conservative caution.

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Crowsolvin, an emulsified croscote that is pleasant to take. Crowsolvin is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, croscote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Crowsolvin contains, in addition to croscote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the croscote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the root of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ.

Crowsolvin is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Crowsolvin Company, Adams, Co. (Ind.)
